

Rambling Roommates Round 3

A game for 2 or more people who live together. Place this card somewhere in your living space. If you see this card and you didn't put it there, place it somewhere else. If this card remains in the same spot for more than a week, or if it is placed in the same location more than once, both players lose. Make sure not to lose.

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

You and one friend pick one of you to keep this card in your pocket. Find a third friend, and the person who doesn't have the card must give a true fact about the person who does, and the person who DOES have the card must give a FALSE fact about the person who DOESNT (Neither of you may explicitly reveal who has the card, you both may only deliver unidentified facts or falsehoods). The third person must guess, based off both statements and the rules of the game, which person has the card. If they guess correctly, the person without the card wins--if they guess wrong, the person WITH the card wins.

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

To win, you must, without either of you touching the card with any other body part and without letting the card fall from either of your mouths, fold the card in half.

You can only play this game once. Put the edge of the end of this card between your teeth, and have a friend do the same to the opposite end.

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

For two players who deeply trust each other, two blindfolds, and a song you both love. Each player must blindfold themselves--one player also places this card in one of their pockets before covering their eyes, and both players sing a song they both love, in unison.

Before the song is finished, the player without this card must locate where on the other player this card is located, and extract it, at which point they win. Their opponent may interfere with them doing this by whatever means they wish, short of taking off their blindfold.

Whichever player has the card by the end of the song, wins! Loser orders pizza or something!

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

Put on lipstick and kiss this card, then give it to someone you love who also loves you.

If they're not around you and they miss you, they can kiss this card.

By Godahl

By Godahl

Throw this card in the air. If it lands illustration side up, get yourself a glass of water. If it lands text side up, throw it in the air again, and again, until it lands illustration side up.

Rambling Roommates Round 3

Rambling Roommates Round 3

Get a group of friends together, and slip this card into someone's pocket without anyone noticing (you could have everyone close their eyes for a bit and announce there's going to be a game, if you don't think you can do this easily). Announce that someone has this card and that they may NOT check their pockets or they lose--then, you can say one fact about your relationship with the person you gave the card to ("My best friend" or "The person I want to know more about" or something like that). Be as vague or as specific as you want. Everyone must then discuss amongst themselves who they think has the card, and may ask you yes or no questions, which you can CHOOSE to answer. Once everyone's guessed who you gave the card to, you can tell the person where the card you gave them is on the person--they win if they guess right, and you may congratulate them.

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

Leave this card rules side up in the sun until the text has totally faded. Then, write your own rules in.

BONUS: Leave it image side up in the sun until that fades, then draw in your own illustration.

By Godahl

Rambling Roommates Round 3

Hold this card in either of your hands when you take a shower. Clean yourself thoroughly. You lose if this card gets wet.

By Godahl